NOTICE OF TRANSMITTAL

The U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) is honored to transmit its twentieth Annual Report to the President of the United States . This report covers the twelve-month period from October 1, 1990 through September 30, 1991 and is submitted in accordance with the provisions of Section 5(a)7 of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science Act (Public Law 91-345, as amended by Public Law 102-95, An Act to improve the operation and effectiveness of the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science and for other purposes).

July 20, 1990, marked the National Commission's twentieth year as a permanent, independent agency established to serve and advise both the Executive and Legislative Branches of government. An abbreviated history of some of the Commission's major accomplishments is highlighted in this special twentieth anniversary edition of the NCLIS Annual Report.

The Members of the Commission are particularly pleased to report on the following work and programs:

- The single major event of Fiscal Year 1991 was, of course, the conduct of the second White House Conference on Library and Information Services held in July 1991. In accordance with Public Law 100-382, the Joint Resolution authorizing and requesting the President to call the Conference, the National Commission has responsibility for planning and conducting the Conference. In Fiscal Year 1992, the Commission's major focus will be on the implementation of the 95 recommendations adopted by the Conference delegates and alternate delegates.

- With the recent passage of the technical amendments to NCLIS' statute, the Commission is exerting its new authority and is expanding its program of promoting research and development to improve the Nation's library and information-handling capability as a link in the national and international communications and cooperative networks.

It is with pride that the Commissioners transmit NCLIS' record of accomplishments for Fiscal Year 1991, and thank President George Bush for the privilege of serving as Members of the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science.

INTRODUCTION

Three major events punctuated the year for the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS):

- January celebration of the Commission's twentieth anniversary,
- July White House Conference on Library and Information Services (WHCLIS),
- August passage of technical amendments to NCLIS' enabling legislation.

The White House Conference on Library and Information Services obviously and rightly dominated all other activities, but the Commission pursued and made progress on other programs too. This progress came despite a budget of $732,000 ($18,000 less than the previous fiscal year) and maintenance of staff level at 6.5 full-time-equivalent positions, the level resulting from cutbacks during the 1990 fiscal year.

The Library Statistics Program and the project on library and information services to Native Americans were especially important in FY 1991. It is significant too that in 1991 NCLIS adopted an additional way of providing advice to the Administration and the Congress by working through and with the Legislative Reference Division of the Office of Management and Budget.

TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

The evening of January 23, 1991, saw over 250 current and former Commissioners and staff, associates and friends, and other distinguished guests present in the Montpelier Room of the Library of Congress' Madison Building for a reception to celebrate NCLIS' twentieth anniversary. The event was co-sponsored by the Library of Congress' Center for the Book, which launched its campaign, "1991 -- The Year of the Lifetime Reader."

Commissioner Elinor Swaim, Chairman of the 20th Anniversary Committee of NCLIS, began the festivities by introducing First Lady Barbara Bush, recipient of NCLIS' Twentieth Anniversary Special Recognition Award for her work in support of literacy. Mrs. Bush is honorary chair of the "Year of the Lifetime Reader" campaign to support reading and literacy for all age groups.

Mrs. Swaim presented the 1991 NCLIS Recognition Award to the President of the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., LaRue Orullian, who was accompanied by Brownie Scouts Kia Massado and Inken Hoepner, for the Girl Scouts' national "Right to Read" project. The 1990 NCLIS Recognition Award was formally presented to Gene Corrigan, Commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference (ACC), which provided television time for public service announcements featuring ACC players and coaches encouraging reading and public library use.

NCLIS Chairman Charles Reid, Librarian of Congress James Billington, and Center for the Book

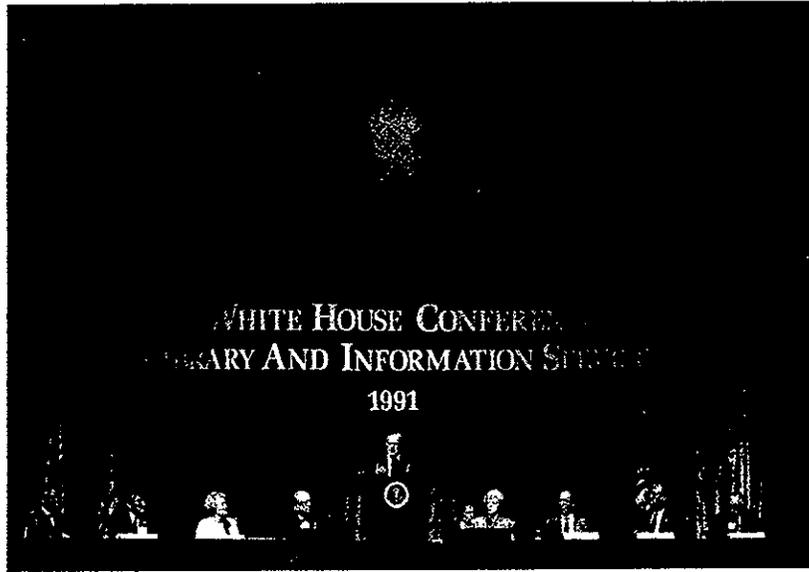

Director John Cole officially greeted the attendees and made remarks at the anniversary celebration.

The Library of Congress contributed $2,500 to the event, plus in-kind services like printing and mailing of invitations and printing of the program. Current and former Commissioners and staff and other NCLIS supporters contributed $5,350 to pay for the anniversary reception.

President Nixon signed legislation forming the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science on July 20, 1970. The President made his appointments to the Commission in May 1971 and the first Commission meeting was September 20-21, 1971.

WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SERVICES

Historically the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science is responsible for one program which is unfailingly first among equals -- the White House Conference on Library and Information Services (WHCLIS). First held in 1979, a second WHCLIS took place over a decade later, July 9-13, 1991. Although administered by its own staff under a separate, specially appropriated budget, WHCLIS was conducted under the direction of the National Commission and its Chairman Charles E. Reid, who served in the dual role of Chairman of the Conference as well.

NCLIS' long-standing involvement with efforts related to the 1991 White House Conference stretches back to the inception in 1979 and ongoing support of the White House Conference on Library and Information Services Taskforce (WHCLIST) and the designation of a Preliminary Design Group, whose 1985 Report established the basis for the WHCLIS process and set the themes of the 1991 Conference: library and information services for enhancing literacy, increasing productivity, and strengthening democracy. As the 1991 WHCLIS drew nearer, NCLIS continued to play a major role in its development.

The 1991 White House Conference on Library and Information Services was mandated by the 100th Congress in a joint resolution (Public Law 100-382) and called by the President in 1988. Upon receipt of the first appropriation in 1989, work began simultaneously and in earnest towards the national conference in Washington and on the numerous events and activities held at the local, state, and regional levels. It is the series of events in the states leading up to the national conference which forms the heart of the White House Conference process.

White House Conferences are mechanisms by which the President and the Congress may ascertain public opinion at the grass roots level on a given set of issues. Conferences also serve to redefine and refocus concerns and priorities among the members of a community with common interests or within the boundaries of a geographic area. As large-scale public policy processes, they involve thousands of individuals across the country in national discussions and debates about issues of concern to them.

The 1991 WHCLIS counted more than 100,000 individual participants across the country, of whom the delegates to state conferences eventually elected 920 to come to the national conference as delegates (636) and alternates (284). The four delegate categories of library and information professionals; library and information services supporters; government officials; and the general public were represented in equal numbers in the state delegations. NCLIS Commissioners were among those intimately involved in the activities in their states, both on a private basis and as representatives of the Commission.

NCLIS was also active in ancillary events such as the pre-conference symposium, "The International Dimension," the invitational pre-conference on networking organized by the Library of Congress' Network Advisory Committee, and the Native American and Alaska Native Library and Information Services Pre-Conference. Particular attention was paid to alliances with other library and information services organizations, such as with the American Library Association's Ad Hoc ALA Committee on the 1991 White House Conference on Library and Information Services. NCLIS and WHCLIS also used the forum provided by ALA to promote the White House Conference in joint exhibits held at the Chicago Midwinter Meeting of January, 1991 and the Public Library Association meeting in San Diego in March, 1991. Further extensive promotion was garnered via NCLIS' specially created 63 megabyte hypertext database, "WHCLIS Connection," developed to inform and support the work of delegates to WHCLIS and all preconferences. The database was available at WHCLIS and at 36 state conference activities, and was requested by 45 other parties. The database contains 33 issue areas, statistics, delegates' names, and the WHCLIS resolutions.

The major NCLIS responsibility for the planning and conduct of WHCLIS was at the national level. The Chairman of the Commission was one of four appointing authorities (the others being the President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President Pro Tempore of the Senate) of the members of the White House Conference Advisory Committee, a 30-member body charged with reviewing a gamut of policy decisions and with advising the WHCLIS staff on their implementation. Richard G. Akeroyd, Jr., State Librarian of Connecticut, chaired this group, which also included NCLIS Chairman Charles Reid as Vice-Chairman; Commissioners James Billington (Librarian of Congress), Daniel W. Casey, and Jerald C. Newman; and former Commissioner and NCLIS Vice-Chairman Emeritus Dr. Bessie Boehm Moore.

NCLIS and the Advisory Committee convened a number of joint meetings, in January, 1991 (Washington, DC); May, 1991 (Arlington, VA) and a final post-conference wrap-up session in October, 1991 (Annapolis, MD). These meetings served as the basis for NCLIS to review plans for the national conference and to engage in group decision-making with the WHCLIS Advisory Committee.

Members of the White House Conference on Library and Information Services Advisory Committee

The Advisory Committee's major charges concentrated on the following three tasks: to plan fair delegate credentialing, to assure a development process for efficient rules for the Washington conference, and to help devise an effective and logical process for managing the mass of recommendations presented to the delegates for their consideration. The first of these assignments was elaborated under the aegis of what later became the Credentials Committee, which included Commissioner Carol DiPrete and which ultimately brought the total number of delegates to 984 with the addition of 64 appointed delegates-at-large. The Rules Committee, including Commissioner J. Michael Farrell, worked out details of voting and other WHCLIS procedures through which delegates considered resolutions and recommendations in a fair and consistent process.

The final task, to organize the recommendations, became an ongoing process in its own right. As thousands of Americans participated in Governors' conferences and other pre-WHCLIS activities in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, six US territories, and the Native American, networking, and federal library communities, they discussed, debated, and voted on the issues each group proposed to bring forth at the national conference. Ultimately the state delegations and other interested parties forwarded a large body of over 2,500 recommendations for consideration by the delegates in Washington. These were reduced by the WHCLIS staff to 1,100 by winnowing out duplicate proposals and those that were applicable only at the regional, state, and local levels. The remaining recommendations were then sorted into ten broad topic categories:

- Access
- Marketing
- Networking
- Preservation
- Technologies
- Governance
- National Information Policies
- Personnel
- Services/Programs
- Training of End Users

To test and refine the method and procedures proposed for delegate consideration of these topics and issues, a three-day Topic Committee meeting (April 19-22, 1991) which combined forty volunteer experts in the ten topics from around the country with NCLIS and WHCLIS staff facilitators, synthesized the 1,100 recommendations into a total of 95 issues indexed to the relevant state recommendations and provided with background statements, questions for discussion, and possible solutions. Commissioner Wanda Forbes and former Commissioner Margaret Warden were among those reviewing the material, which was then compiled into an Issue Briefing Book for dissemination to the delegates prior to the July, 1991, conference.

To perform WHCLIS' substantive work of identifying a final set of recommendations to be put to the vote, delegates were divided into 30 small discussion groups (which met during the July conference), some working within the same topic. However, instead of further reducing the number of recommendations, over two days the delegate groups had generated a total of 765 recommendations. It was then the responsibility of the Conference Recommendations Committee, consisting of two people elected from each topic group and nine individuals appointed by the Conference Chairman (totalling 29 people and including Commissioner Wanda Forbes and former Commissioner Lee Edwards), to reconsolidate the final pool of recommendations for consideration by all WHCLIS delegates in plenary session.

In two all-night sessions, the CRC reduced the number to 178 and then to 126, but had yet to rework the sometimes awkward language of the recommendations. At this point the delegates were requested to assign, by ballot, the relative importance of each proposal by prioritizing the list to determine the order in which the recommendations would be considered at the plenary session. The CRC ultimately presented a final draft of 118 recommendations for the delegates' floor vote, which resulted in the 96 recommendations included in the WHCLIS Summary Report. Of these 96, six were added as the result of delegate petitions.

Although the five days of WHCLIS could easily have been filled solely by the small group discussions and plenary sessions where the delegates considered the recommendations, the schedule included other events. The President and Mrs. Bush, Marilyn Quayle, Senator Paul Simon, Representative Major Owens, Secretary of Education Lamar Alexander, NCLIS Commissioner and Librarian of Congress James Billington, and others addressed the assembled delegates. Keynote speakers elaborated on the three WHCLIS themes; participants in the Great Debate presented their views on current and future library and information services roles; and an Open Forum chaired by Commissioner J. Michael Farrell gave interested parties the opportunity to present additional testimony on topics of concern to all WHCLIS attendees. The Joint Congressional hearing elicited both reasoned expositions on the importance of library and information services and emotional personal accounts of learning to read. And throughout the surrounding whirlwind of activity, the Resource Center, operated largely by the Library of Congress with some outside help, provided information and research support for delegates, journalists, and others. In addition, the Resource Center served to demonstrate the library and information services available in support of the full range of topics, issues, and concerns of the delegates and others attending WHCLIS.

Despite the long and arduous tasks of planning and conducting the WHCLIS, NCLIS Commissioners shared in the ebullient mood of the delegates at the closing banquet. The celebration served as testimony to the ultimate success of the meeting and the entire conference process. The task now before NCLIS and the entire community of library and information service providers is to ensure that the next phase, implementation of the recommendations, is equally successful.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS TO NCLIS STATUTE

Public Law 102-95, "National Commission on Libraries and Information Science Act Amendments of 1991," makes technical amendments to the Commission's authorizing legislation, PL 91-345, enacted in 1970. Five of its provisions relate solely to the operation of the Commission, while one provision addresses its functions under the mission statement.

The Amendments eliminate the requirement to procure administrative services through HEW (later through the Department of Education). NCLIS is now free to contract for such services with any other Federal agency or private sector company or to perform them in-house.

The Amendments also clarify and expand the Commission's right to receive gifts, which previously were limited to monetary contributions deposited by the donor into a special U.S. Treasury account for purposes specified on a case-by-case basis. NCLIS may now receive, keep, and administer in-kind gifts of real and personal property directly, while monetary gifts or proceeds from the sale of in-kind gifts are to be deposited with the Treasury by NCLIS with no need to specify the proposed use of the funds.

A simple majority of Commission members now constitutes a quorum for voting and the conduct of business, and members whose terms have expired continue to serve until a successor is appointed or July 19 of the year after their appointment has ended, whichever comes first. The latter provision also eliminates an enumeration of terms of appointment for the start-up Commission of 1971.

The final amendment affecting the Commission's operation is an increase in the twenty-year-old authorization level from $750,000 to $911,000 for FY 1992 and "such sums as may be necessary" for all subsequent years. This lifts the budget cap, leaves the authorization level open for the foreseeable future, and allows NCLIS some measure of flexibility in requesting funds to meet escalating costs.

The technical amendments also expand one of the Commission's charges as listed in the "Functions" section of the original authorizing legislation: to promote research and development to improve the Nation's library and information-handling capability as a link in the "national and international communications and cooperative networks." The addition of the words "international" and "cooperative" reflects the evolving nature of networking, which often is the product of cooperative efforts and international in scope. See Public Law 102-95, Appendix II.

LIBRARY STATISTICS

NCLIS and the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) continued to make progress through a cooperative program on library statistics, which began in 1988. In April 1991 the first compilation of data from 8,699 public libraries in all 50 States and the District of Columbia, based on national standard data elements and definitions, was made available by NCES in both printed and machine-readable form on floppy disks. By the end of September, collection of data for 1990 had been completed and was being analyzed for completeness and quality before publication early in 1992.

Development of the Public Library Universe File, with directory information on all public library service units in the U.S., also progressed much more rapidly in 1991 than expected. This file lacked only one State report at the end of the fiscal year. The Universe File is essential to the drawing of valid, reliable samples for future sample and fast response studies for needed public library data. An example of a national sample survey under consideration is the collection of information on physical access for the handicapped to public library buildings.

A third annual training workshop for State Data Coordinators for public libraries was held in fiscal 1991, and two model training programs - in Nevada and Texas - were funded to improve the quality of local public library statistical collection and reporting. Two meetings were held with the Chief Officers of State Library Agencies (COSLA) on the present and future plans for the improvement and developing of nationwide library statistics.

Academic library statistics took a major step forward in 1991 with the cooperative work of NCLIS, NCES and the American Library Association's Office of Research and Statistics. Standard software was prepared to be used to record 1990 statistics, which all states have now submitted, and the compilation may be published 9-12 months faster than previous national data. A training session for library and academic representatives involved in collecting and reporting academic library statistics was held early in FY 1991. Plans began for further improvements in the quality and usefulness of the 1992 and 1994 biennial academic library surveys.

Progress was also made in collecting data on the nation's school library media centers. The major NCES School and Staff Survey for 1990-91 contains several key questions on library media centers. A new questionnaire on school library media centers and specialists, planned in cooperation with NCLIS and the American Association of School Librarians, was field tested in March 1991. The results of the survey will provide important national data on school library media collections, expenditures, technology and services.

Planning and recommendations for a state library survey are underway, and a future survey of state-based networks is under consideration as well. Also in the planning stage for possible implementation in 1993 is a survey of federal libraries and information centers. Planning meetings were held with representatives of the Federal Library and Information Center Committee, administered from the Library of Congress.

LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SERVICES TO NATIVE AMERICANS

The Commission's Committee on Library and Information Services to Native Americans, chaired by Elinor Swaim, held its third and fourth regional hearings to obtain information on the status of tribal library and information services and to receive recommendations for the kinds of services required to meet the needs of the tribes living in those areas. (The first regional hearing, for the Southwest, was in Santa Fe, New Mexico, in January 1989. The second, for the Southeast, was in Winter Park, Florida, in March 1990.)

On October 24, 1990, the Commission conducted its third regional hearing on the library and information services needs of Native Americans living on or near federally recognized tribes. This third hearing was for the Northeast and was held in Hartford, Connecticut.

Tribes represented at the hearing included the Seneca Nation, New York; the Mashantucket Pequot Indian Reservation, Connecticut; and the Nisqually Tribe. Testimony was also provided from the Native American Library Roundtable, the American Indian Library Association, the National Congress of American Indians, and the New York State Library. The hearing was preceded by site visits to library, museum and information service facilities in Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New York and Rhode Island.

Twenty-three tribes participated when NCLIS held its fourth regional hearing in Seattle, Washington, on August 16, for the Pacific Northwest and the Mountain Plains. Those testifying at the hearing included representatives from the Colville Confederated Tribes, the Lummi Indian Reservation, the Puyallup Tribe of Indians and the Nisqually Indian Tribe, Washington; the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, Montana; the Round Valley Indian Reservation, California; and the Native Hawaiians. Written testimony was received from other tribal and library representatives. Site visits prior to the hearing were conducted in California, Montana and Washington.

At both hearings there was testimony on the needs for improved library facilities, professionally trained library staff, technical assistance, and additional and consistent funding for tribal libraries from federal, state and local sources.

At year's end, plans for the fifth regional hearing were being made for October 16, 1991, in Anchorage, Alaska.

While the two hearings and sets of site visits were being planned and carried out, work was also underway on a strategic plan to provide Native American tribes with adequate library and information services. From December 1990 through March 1991 Mary Ellen Keck was on detail to NCLIS from the Office of Administrative Services, U.S. Department of the Interior, to draft this plan. She developed the draft plan in consultation with many individuals and organizations, and NCLIS subsequently gave wide distribution to the draft for comments and suggestions.

The Commission also helped to plan and carry out the February 28-March 3 pre-White House Conference on Native American Library and Information Services and the special hearing on Native Americans, called by Senator Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, Chairman of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs.

ADVICE TO EXECUTIVE AND LEGISLATIVE BRANCHES

The Commission worked with the Legislative Reference Division of the Office of Management and Budget, which coordinates executive agencies' recommendations on proposed, pending and enrolled legislation. The types of items NCLIS reviewed included legislative staff working drafts, congressional subcommittee or committee markups, proposed reports from the executive branch and draft statements of administration policy. NCLIS examined and commented on documents pertaining to the following initiatives or bills:

- American Technology Preeminence Act of 1991
- S.1034 and H.R. 1989

- High Performance Computing Act of 1991 (containing provisions for the National Research and Education Network)
- S. 272 and H.R. 656

- Higher Education Act reauthorization

- National Literacy Act of 1991
- H.R. 751

- Patent and Trademark Laws Amendments of 1991

The Commission was also in contact with the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs at OMB about the proposed revision to Circular A-130, "Management of Federal Information Resources."

NCLIS aided the Congress by arranging the joint hearing during the White House Conference on Library and Information Services. The hearing was co-chaired by Senator Claiborne Pell (D-RI), Chairman of the Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities of the Senate's Labor and Human Resources Committee, and by Representative Pat Williams (D-MT), Chairman of Labor-Management Relations Subcommittee of the House's Education and Labor Committee. The hearing was scheduled to receive testimony on library and information services from invited witnesses.

NCLIS also assisted the Senate's Select Committee on Indian Affairs, chaired by Senator Daniel K. Inouye (D-HI), in arranging for a hearing on library and information services to Native Americans.

Other assistance included NCLIS Chairman Reid's letters to the states encouraging them to adapt and implement policies similar to that of the Congressional resolution on permanent papers, and the subsequent report to Congress of states' responses on their use or plans for using permanent papers. The July 22, 1991, Congressional Record carried Sen. Claiborne Pell's acknowledgement of Chairman Reid's work and reprinted the report from the states that responded to Mr. Reid's letter.

PRINCIPLES OF PUBLIC INFORMATION

The Commission developed and in June 1990 adopted the Principles of Public Information, asserting that public information is information owned by the people, held in trust by the government, and should be available to the people except where restricted by law.

Ten thousand copies of the Principles were printed by NCLIS to distribute to groups and individuals, including the attendees at NCLIS' January 23, 1991, Twentieth Anniversary Celebration. Copies were sent to all U.S. governors and state librarians, with cover letters encouraging their use and adoption at the state level.

Disseminating the Principles and promoting their adoption by agencies and groups continue. Reactions to the Principles have highlighted issues and concerns that NCLIS expects to address in combination with related recommendations from the White House Conference on Library and Information Services.

Leaders of the International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions (IFLA) in 1991 expressed considerable interest in presenting NCLIS' Principles of Public Information at the 1992 IFLA conference, and work on that opportunity had begun by the end of the 1991 fiscal year.

INFORMATION LITERACY

In 1990 the Commission published the proceedings of the symposium, "Information Literacy and Education for the 21st Century; Toward an Agenda for Action," that it co-sponsored in 1989 with the American Association of School Librarians. The printed proceedings were in much demand and required a reprint in 1991. Bernan Associates contributed funds to NCLIS for the reprint.

Commissioner Wanda Forbes and staff members continued to be active in the National Forum on Information Literacy. Staff also represented NCLIS and WHCLIS at meetings of the National Coalition on Literacy.

Attention to information literacy and literacy in general was boosted by the President's and the governors' 1990 adoption of six education goals for the United States and by the April 1991 release of the administration's AMERICA 2000 Education Strategy to enable achievement of the goals. Commissioners and staff and WHCLIS delegates spent considerable time reviewing the AMERICA 2000 strategy and discussing libraries' and information services' placement in education.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

Since FY 1986 NCLIS has cooperated with the Department of State to monitor and coordinate proposals for International Conventions and Scientific Organizations Contributions (ICSOC) grants and to disburse the funds. The six-year total is $1,055,500, $182,000 of which was awarded in FY 1991 for the following projects:

International Federation of Library Associations and Institutions (IFLA) for international workshop on machine-readable cataloging:
$35,000;

National Information Standards Organization (NISO) for U.S. representation in international standards development: $45,000;

U.S. National Committee to International Federation for Information and Documentation (FID) for U.S. representatives and education and training activities: $45,000;

U.S. National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) for U.S. representation and support of international meeting: $15,000;

In August 1991, Commissioner Daniel Casey represented NCLIS at the IFLA conference in Moscow. Mr. Casey met with the IFLA President and the IFLA Secretary, who encouraged NCLIS to develop and present to the 1992 IFLA gathering an international edition of the Commission's Principles of Public Information.

Also in August 1991, the passage of technical amendments to NCLIS' enabling legislation made it clear that NCLIS is to be involved in international cooperative activities (P.L. 102-95, sec. 4., in Appendix II).

RECOGNITION AWARDS

On January 23, NCLIS gave First Lady Barbara Bush its Twentieth Anniversary Special Recognition Award in appreciation of her long-standing commitment to libraries and literacy. Mrs. Bush accepted the award from Commission Elinor Swaim, Chairman of the Twentieth Anniversary Committee and the Recognition Awards Committee.

The organizational recipient of the fourth annual recognition award, also presented January 23, was the Girl Scouts of the U.S. A. The Scouts' "Right to Read" project encourages Brownies and Junior Girl Scouts not only to read but to help others learn to read and to use their reading skills for the benefits of their friends, families and communities.

In April 1991 NCLIS sent out requests for nominations for the fifth round of awards, with the deadline for nominating individuals or organizations set for November 29, 1991.

In January the Commissioners discharged the Budget Committee and assigned its duties to the Executive Committee, which met in Washington, D.C., three times in 1990-1991: December 11-12, April 17-18, and August 29-30. Chairman Reid served ex officio on all NCLIS committees and also on the Advisory Council of the National Center for Education Statistics.

The full Commission met four times during the fiscal year, with the meetings tied to related events in all four cases. The October 25-26 sessions were held in Hartford, CT, in conjunction with the hearing and site visits on library and information services to Native Americans in the northeastern United States. January 24-25, in Washington, D.C., was the annual organizational and planning meeting, preceded by committee meetings and the 20th anniversary celebration on the 23rd. Commissioners met with the White House Conference Advisory Committee May 14-15 and then held a separate NCLIS meeting May 16, all in Arlington, VA. The Commission convened for a one-day meeting July 14 in Washington, D.C., immediately after the White House Conference.

The 1991 fiscal year began with continuing resolutions and a sequester of funds, the result of which was an NCLIS budget $732,000. (See Appendix VII for financial statement.)

The permanent staff for NCLIS stayed the same as it was at the end of 1989-1990. In addition to the seven (6.5 FTE positions) individuals on the NCLIS payroll in permanent jobs, Barbara Whiteleather worked as a special assistant to the director and the Commission, and John Lorenz, Mimie Rutledge, and Kim Miller were employed as consultants for the Library Statistics Project (LSP). Debbie Kelly temporarily filled Kim Miller's slot while the latter was on Naval Reserve active duty during the Desert Shield/Desert Storm months. In April Larry LaMoure began as a consultant to the LSP, and was joined in September by Alex Peake, with both working on technical, database and programming matters.

Frank Stevens continued his detail from the Department of Education to assist the WHCLIS with special projects, particularly the U.S. territories' pre-conference activities and their participation in the national Conference. Mr. Stevens' major assignments for NCLIS included information literacy and library and information services to Native Americans. His detail ended in August 1991, but Education allowed him to continue into the 1992 fiscal year to help complete the site visits and hearings and prepare reports.

Mary Ellen Keck served the Commission on detail from the Department of the Interior from December 1990-March 1991. She developed the framework, collected data, wrote, had published, and distributed a draft of a Strategic Plan for the Development of Library and Information Services to Native Americans.

Joint Resolution

Aug. 8, 1988
[H.J. Res. 90]

To authorize and request the President to call and conduct a White House Conference on Library and Information Services to be held not earlier than September 1, 1989, and not later than September 30, 1991, and for other purposes.

20 USC 1501

Whereas access to information and ideas is indispensable to the development of human potential, the advancement of civilization, and the continuance of enlightened self-government;

Whereas the preservation and the dissemination of information and ideas are the primary purpose and function of the library and information services;

Whereas the economic vitality of the United States in a global economy and the productivity of the work force of the Nation rest on access to information in the postindustrial information age;

Whereas the White House Conference on Library and Information Services of 1979 began a process in which a broadly representative group of citizens made recommendations that have improved the library and information services of the Nation, and sparked the Nation's interest in the crucial role of library and information services at home and abroad;

Whereas library and information service is essential to a learning society;

Whereas social, demographic, and economic shifts of the past decade have intensified the rate of change and require that Americans of all age groups develop and sustain literacy and other lifelong learning habits;

Whereas expanding technological developments offer unprecedented opportunities for application to teaching and learning and to new means to provide access to library and information services;

Whereas the growth and augmentation of the Nation's library and information services are essential if all Americans, without regard to race, ethnic background, or geographic location are to have reasonable access to adequate information and lifelong learning;

Whereas the future of our society depends on developing the learning potential inherent in all children and youth, especially literary, reading, research, and retrieval skills;

Whereas rapidly developing technology offers a potential for enabling libraries and information services to serve the public more fully; and

Whereas emerging satellite communication networks and other technologies offer unparalleled opportunity for access to education opportunities to all parts of the world, and to individuals who are homebound, handicapped, or incarcerated: Now, therefore, be it
